

KEY INSIGHTS

1. Premium Members Generate Higher Revenue

The analysis shows that customers with Premium and Gold memberships contribute the highest share of total revenue. These customers tend to purchase more items and spend significantly more compared to Basic members. This indicates that loyalty programs play a major role in increasing customer value and retention.

2. Discounts Positively Influence Customer Spending

Customers who received discounts demonstrated higher average spending than customers without discounts. The statistical hypothesis testing also confirmed that discounts have a significant impact on purchasing behavior. This suggests that promotional campaigns can effectively improve sales and customer engagement.

3. Customer Satisfaction Impacts Repeat Purchases

Highly satisfied customers tend to make purchases more frequently and show stronger engagement with the platform. Customers with higher ratings also displayed better retention behavior, indicating that improving customer experience can directly support long-term business growth.

4. Younger and Middle-Aged Customers Are More Active

Customers in younger and middle-age groups were found to be more active shoppers with higher purchasing frequency. This customer segment represents an important target audience for personalized marketing and promotional strategies.

5. Membership Programs Improve Customer Loyalty

The data reveals that higher membership tiers are associated with increased spending, better satisfaction levels, and stronger purchasing behavior. This highlights the importance of loyalty programs in retaining customers and maximizing revenue generation.